PURPOSE

This addendum accompanies the Official Academic Transcript and High School Diploma issued by the School of Record named above. It explains the legal standing of a home school in Texas, so that an admissions office, recruiter or employer can read the enclosed documents in their proper context.

LEGAL AUTHORITY IN TEXAS

Texas Education Code § 51.9241

This statute requires Texas public institutions of higher education to admit first-time freshmen who are graduates of a home school on the same basis as graduates of a public high school. The parent or guardian who operates the home school states the graduate's completion in writing, in the same role a public school's principal signs for its graduates.

Leeper v. Texas State Board of Education, 903 S.W.2d 100 (Tex. App.—Austin 1994, writ denied)

The Texas Court of Appeals held that a home school that teaches in a bona fide manner a curriculum of reading, spelling, grammar, mathematics and good citizenship is a private school under Texas law. It may therefore issue its own diploma and transcript, and no state agency reviews or endorses them.

The School of Record operates as a home school under these authorities. Its Administrator issues the enclosed documents in that capacity, as the law provides.
